HOMES AND HOVELS

It was a happy thought that led to the holding of an Ideal Homes Exhibition in Hongkong. It was a happier thought that led to the donating of the proceeds to children who possess no ideal home. If a home at all, it was a bright thought that led to turning the two idle ferry landing stages into exhibition sites. It was a brighter thought that led the promoters to coax local manufacturers and agents into cooperating on so large a scale.

Should you visit the Hongkong division of the Exhibition, you will find that it is devoted to household appliances. Here, if you have the money, is everything that takes the drudgery out of household chores. The only appliance yet lacking is one that can make the beds.

For here the floor is swept and polished, carpets are dusted, clothes are washed and dried, seemingly in one effort-pressure of a button, while the appliances themselves sparkle with chromium efficiency.

On the Kowloon side, we see just how rooms can be made to look if one can afford a large apartment. Not only efficiency, but artistic ingenuity has fashioned and arranged rooms to suit the most exacting person. Both the Orient and the Occident mingle to create the most exotic effects, pleasing to the eye, pleasant to creature comfort.

Then suddenly one is stunned by a study in contrasts. For in the Hongkong section is erected a dingy and miserable squatters' home set down amidst the articles which make not only the ideal home, but the luxurious home. Even the most callous must stop and consider. It might be asked: "What can one do?" For it must be remembered that this is the lot of not just an unfortunate few but a large number of Hongkong people, and that despite all our resettlement and rehousing it will remain for years to come Hongkong's worst human problem. But if a few shall determine that this shall be no more; if a few shall forget ideologies, and get down to the practical issues of caring for their neighbors; if there be less talk and more action; if, in short, society would address itself to individual humans, and have less to say about humanity, not only the home, but the world would be an ideal place.

High technical standards in Hongkong acknowledged COLONY'S BIG NEW INDUSTRY

Mr. James Man-hon Wu, Managing Director of the China Cold Storage and Engineering Co Ltd, signing the agreement with Mr. W. Knox, President of Westinghouse Electric International Co Ltd, at Westinghouse headquarters in New York on October 31.

UN IN GUN BATTLE WITH CONGOLESE Bullets fly in the Congo

Leopoldville, Nov. 22. Tunisian UN forces protecting the Ghanaian Embassy in Leopoldville fought a pitched battle with the Congolese National Army last night and this morning when the Congolese tried to force their way into the Embassy.

At least three soldiers were killed on each side and many others were wounded.

The battle was still going on four hours after it started at 7.40 pm when the Congolese tried to enforce an expulsion.

General Alkhye confirmed later that a ceasefire had been agreed to, and according to General Alexander attempts will be made to have Mr. Welbeck withdrawn from the Congo tomorrow morning.

Order on Ghanaian Charge D'Affaires Nathaniel Welbeck, who was refusing to leave until a Ghanaian plane came for him. The battle, punctuated by machine-gun fire and at least four shots from Congolese 37mm cannon, died down briefly just before midnight, but flared up minutes later with continuous bursts from a heavy machine-gun apparently mounted on a Congolese army vehicle.

Just over an hour before, at 10.45 pm UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld's military adviser in the Congo, Brigadier Indegit Rikhye, had met with the commander of the Ghanaian forces in the Congo, General H. T. Alexander.

Together, they attempted to drive to the battle scene—with a joint Congolese-UN escort—and arrange for the departure of Welbeck, whose plane had reportedly arrived at Leopoldville's Ndjili airport. But their mission failed when their cars were turned back by a Congolese armoured car.

Asked who was responsible for the first shot in the battle, Brigadier Rikhye said: "In the present state of the situation it is not right to make judgments on anything."

Casualty

One of the casualties was Congolese strongman Col. Joseph Mobutu's second-in-command, Col. M. Kékoko, who was killed instantly by a bullet through the heart.

The battle broke out soon after Ghana Ambassador Nathaniel Welbeck defied an expulsion order by remaining in the face of Interior High Commissioner Joseph Musumba.

Musumba immediately sent for troops. But before they arrived, 200 Tunisian troops of the UN got there and deployed behind bushes, trees and walls in the embassy grounds with their backs to the Congo River. When the Congolese opened fire, with rifles, machine-guns and cannon from armoured cars, the United Nations rushed in 800 Tunisian reinforcements who surrounded the Congolese. Another 100 were sent in later. —AFP and UPI.

USAF PLANE CRASH

Ankara, Nov. 21. A twin-engine US Air Force plane crashed today, killing at least 3 of its 9 occupants, between Kayseri and Sivas in central Turkey.

Aboard the plane were two American crewmen, two American civilians belonging to Turkish-American liaison services, one Turkish non-commissioned officer and a Turkish liaison civilian. —AFP.

Westinghouse products to be made here

BY DAVID LAN

Hongkong climbs up another rung in the ladder of industrial development next year when a $5 million local plant at Quarry Bay launches the production of a world-famous range of American electrical appliances.

The factory, the China Cold Storage and Engineering Co Ltd, is scheduled to manufacture $26,000,000 worth of Westinghouse electrical products per year under licence from the U.S. firm.

Production will start with 6,000 room-type air-conditioners, 1,000 packaged air-conditioning units, and 100,000 electric fans per year.

The range of products is expected to widen later to include refrigerators, electric motors, other domestic appliances and refrigerating and ventilating equipment for industrial use.

Mr. James Man-hon Wu, Managing Director of the China Cold Storage and Engineering Co Ltd, the local licensee, signed the agreement with Westinghouse on October 31 in New York.

Valid

Mr. W. Knox, President of the Westinghouse Electric International Co Ltd, signed for the American company side.

The agreement is valid for ten years during which Westinghouse will supply designs, blueprints, specifications, manufacturing techniques, and the finer points of the processes. The American firm will also train local personnel and send over engineers to Hongkong from time to time.

On his way back from abroad to the Colony, Mr. Wu has bought additional machinery worth more than $1 million to supplement equipment already in the factory. This includes presses and other metal-working machinery from Britain and America.

Raw material—such as wire, copper tubing, aluminium, and steel sheets—will come from Britain. Only compressors will be supplied by Westinghouse.

The local plant will manufacture the various motors themselves. The plant occupies an area of 50,000 square feet, on which there is a five-storeyed building.

Soon there will be an expansion for an assembly line, either attached to the present plant or situated elsewhere.

Significance

Hongkong made Westinghouse electric appliances will be sold everywhere in the world except the U.S.A. and Canada, where special authorisation is required.

"The significance of this is not so much in the money-making part as the fact that one of the world's leading electric manufacturers has recognized Hongkong's industrial capability as being of a high enough standard to share their name with us," Mr. Wu said.

"This is one way for local industry to benefit from an industrially-advanced country. Many countries in the world such as Japan, Germany, France, Italy and even England have developed their industries in this manner." He added: "The plan will assure local manufacturers access to the latest research development on which Westinghouse spends many millions of dollars each year."

AMERICAN, 2 BRITONS HELD FOR HOURS

Leopoldville, Nov. 21.

One American and two British newspaper men, arrested here by Congolese soldiers earlier yesterday, were released last night after several hours of negotiations.

They were John Starr of the London Daily Mail, Stephen Harper of the London Daily Express and a Washington Post special correspondent.

Their arrest followed a violent verbal clash between pressmen and Congolese soldiers during the Congolese army's encircling operation at the Ghana embassy.

A Congolese police officer shouted abuse at pressmen, who were taking photographs, and in front of the soldiers called them "UN spies" and said they were "All Communists and will be thrown out."

The Congolese officials also seized a number of newspapermen's cars after this incident. —AFP.

MAC MEETS FANFANI

Rome, Nov. 21.

Mr. Harold Macmillan and Professor Amintore Fanfani, the British and Italian Prime Ministers, started their talks here tonight with a two-hour general review of the international situation.

Professor Fanfani afterwards described the discussions as "very cordial" and said Mr. Macmillan was a "forwent admirer" of Italy.

An Italian spokesman said the two Premiers touched on relations between East and West and disarmament in their talks. —Reuters.

ARMED INVASION OF DUTCH NEW GUINEA REPORTED

The Hague, Nov. 21.

A small band of Indonesian infiltrators armed with automatic weapons and hand grenades landed last week in Dutch New Guinea, it was officially announced here today.

Some of the Indonesians were later captured. They stated that further infiltrating groups could be expected to land in the near future, the announcement said.

Indonesia claims sovereignty over Dutch New Guinea, which it calls West Irian. The men, who were stated to be in possession of guns, a few automatic weapons and hand grenades, were met by a counter-attack shortly after landing, the Ministry said.

But in Diakaria, the army today denied charges that Indonesia had invaded Dutch New Guinea.

The spokesman, Lt-Col. M. Ny Sunarjo, said Indonesian army headquarters "has heard no reports of any action on the West Irian frontiers." The spokesman said it was "highly unlikely" any action occurred, adding that it was "also highly unlikely" that there were any army activities in the Irian sector. —Reuters and UPI.

ST FRANCIS HOTEL MURDER: NO ARREST

No arrest has been made yet in the case of the man found murdered in a room at St. Francis Hotel at noon yesterday. The murdered man, an unidentified Chinese about 30 years of age, was discovered by a room boy with stab wounds on the head and back.

A DAGGER

It is understood that the man had come in with another man the previous night. The other man left the room early in the morning. The police found a letter, a dagger and a cotton pad on the premises.

SIR WINSTON GETS OUT OF BED

London, Nov. 21.

Sir Winston Churchill got out of bed today for the first time since falling and breaking a small bone in his back last week.

Attendants propped him in a chair where he sat for a while—cheerful despite the clatter of street drills outside the window of his London home.

Sir Winston's venture out of bed was reported by his post-law, Agriculture Minister Mr. Christopher Soames. "He seems to be very well," Mr. Soames said. —AP.

WHALE OF A TRAFFIC JAM

Capetown, Nov. 22.

London closes mixed

London, Nov. 21. Industrial issues gave a mixed performance in a quiet market, but sentiment was buoyed by the government's bill widening the scope of the investment of trustee funds to include common stock of Ford Company.

Engineering, Shipping and Motors went higher with Ford gaining 2½ at 138/9. News that the government had consented to the U.S. Ford bid to buy most minority shareholding of common stocks at 145/6. The question is whether the big stock holders will also accept this price.

Textiles were mixed and stores eased while leaders like Imperial Chemical Industries, Dunlop and Courtaulds suffered small losses.

City turned quiet and drifted lower. War loan 3½ per cent losing 3/9 at 461½. Dollar stocks moved irregularly.

Big increase in Malayan imports from W. Germany

By Gordon Hung

Kuala Lumpur, Nov. 21. Malaya's imports from West Germany during the first eight months of this year totalled M$80,400,000—M$16,600,000 more than the same period last year and $22,600,000 more than for the first eight months of 1958.

But economists here did not consider the increase in trade an "onslaught" on the products of Britain and other countries in the Malayan market. "Rather," said an expert, "there has been over the past few years, a bigger share for all countries because of the greatly increased buying power here and greater consumption, which reflects on Malaya's prosperity." Economists here said that Malaya could afford to buy more German goods because of her higher purchasing ability. This followed the good price of rubber and the increase in its exports.

Malaya and Singapore import "practically everything" from Germany—bulldozers, from West Germany. The biggest single item is motor vehicles. During the first half of this year 38 million worth of vehicles were brought in. This was $2,700,000 more than last year, according to the Government statistics.

MOST NOTICEABLE

Malaysian exports to Germany amounted to 198 million from January to August this year—$74,900,000 more than for the same period last year and $100 million more than for the 1958 period. Imports from Germany totalled $85,100,000 in 1958 and $111,100,000 in 1959 while exports to Germany totalled $155,900,000 in 1958 and $223,900,000 in 1959. Malaya sold Germany $126,800,000 worth of rubber in the first half of this year—$1

Stocks finished in a broad scramble of plus and minus signs with the best gains achieved once again by the special situations.

New York, Nov. 21.

Blue Chips were down on balance but a 2½ point gain in Eastman Kodak enabled the Dow Jones Industrial average to keep fairly close to home. Steels dipped in reaction to the lowest weekly operating rate since July 4. Most Electronics were 1 to 2 points higher while Brunswick and AMF gained 2 or more in the bonding equipments. Universal Match and Vendo rose around 2½ in the vendings. Polaroid jumped nearly 6 in the cameras. American Photocopy added over 3 and Ampex added 1½.

United Artists rose a point in the motion pictures where Twentieth Century-Fox gained around 1½. Corn Products and Heinz rose 2 or more in the foods. Pepsi and Coke jumped around 1½.

Among the rails, Norfolk and Western rose 1½ and Western Pacific a point. Dupont, off around 3 at one time, came back to round a point loss.

U.S. gold reserves falling to low point

Washington, Nov. 21. United States gold reserves this week are expected to fall below $18,000 million (about $6,424 million)—the lowest point for more than 20 years.

The Treasury reported today in its regular daily statement that the gold holdings stood at $18,000,000,742 ($6,424,100,365) on November 10.

In issuing the statement, treasury officials indicated that the reserves were likely to drop below the $18,000 million level within the next day or two.

ORDERS
In a bid to curb the rapid outflow of gold and dollars, President Eisenhower last week issued a series of orders to the military services and other government agencies to reduce overseas spending.

Although these measures are expected eventually to reduce U.S. expenditures abroad by $1,000 million (about $337 million) annually, officials said they were not likely to have any appreciable effect until well into 1961.—Reuter.

India's foreign exchange reserves drop

New Delhi, Nov. 21.

India's foreign exchange reserves are down to "rock bottom," the Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, told Parliament today, and import cuts causing "a good deal of hardship" were inevitable.

India's sterling balance fell in the last seven months by 480 million rupees (about $36 million) to 1,410 million rupees (about $108 million). "As our reserves are already down to rock bottom," the minister added, "there is no scope for running them further down."

"We have thus to depend wholly on foreign aid for financing our development plans."—Reuter.

Sugar market

New York, Nov. 21.

World No. 4 sugar futures today closed unchanged to two points higher of sales of only two contracts.

Domestic No. 6 futures finished unchanged with no sales reported. The dull situation in both the world and domestic trade continued. Nothing is expected to be sold in the actual market for the present since the relatively heavy offerings are so far under the Cuban Government's minimum export price.

It was rumoured that Polish raws had been offered as low as 2.85 cents a pound.—UPI.

Fine achievement by adjustable wing aircraft

The adjustable wing aircraft, SB.5, built by Short Brothers and Harland, recently (October 18) made a new mark in aviation progress when it flew from the airfield of the Royal Aircraft Establishment (Bedford) in the U.K., with the wings swept back at an angle of 69 degrees. This is a more pronounced continuous sweep-back than of any other aeroplane in the world.

The aircraft, which flew after only one taxiing run, was airborne for 20 minutes. The plane was designed to investigate problems of the low speed control of transonic or supersonic wing configurations. The design of the aircraft allows for setting of the mainplanes at three different angles of sweep-back and also for the tailplane to be placed either on top of the fin or below the rear fuselage.

valuable knowledge to supersonic aircraft design problems concerning take-off, landing, and low-speed handling.—LPS.

Ticket conveyor at airport

A ticket and document conveyor which will help to speed the documentation of passengers, has been installed for British European Airways at London Airport.

Designed and manufactured by a U.K. firm it is built in eight bays, each 6 ft. 10 ins. long, and stands 8 ft. 3 ins. from the floor. The conveyor is fed by documents to the flight control desk. The total length is 62 ft. 2 ins. and can be increased if necessary.

The main conveyor structure is of aluminium, with Perspex side members providing a full view of the tickets or documents being conveyed. The drive unit, at floor level, comprises a fractional horsepower, electric motor, suitably tensioned, driving an endless belt running at 100 ft. per minute which passes over aluminium rollers revolving on "Sealed for Life" bearings. The tickets are "posted" at any one of eight posting slots, one to each bay.

The manufacturers say that although the conveyor at London Airport is designed to deal with tickets up to 6 ins. deep, the design could readily be adapted for using larger sheets, or could be used for handling work cards, records, and numerous types of documents and correspondence which passes between departments in large modern offices and factories where speed is essential. Many variations can be made including reversing mechanisms, speed variation, directional changes and inclines, counters, additional discharge points and stops for holding tickets for individual attention.

The lightness in weight and the manufacture of standard sections provides for easy and quick installation under almost any reasonable condition.—LPS.

NEWS BLACKOUT IS IMPOSED

U.S.-GERMAN TALKS ON GOLD DRAIN

Bonn, Nov. 21.
A stringent news blackout was imposed as high level German-American talks opened here today on West German aid in stopping the drain on America's gold reserves.

Officials explained the blackout by saying the two governments did not wish to engage in public wrangling while the negotiations were going on.

Informal sources said earlier that the discrepancy between American and German views on how much help West Germany could give was "rather large."

CAMBRIDGE A PISTOL DUEL AT DAWN

Cambridge, Nov. 21.
Cambridge University authorities have stopped a proposed "pistol duel" at dawn between two undergraduates.

William Hawkes, a second-year Jesus College student had challenged Tony Croft of St John's College "for staining a gentleman's honour."

Both men called off the duel after the authorities had intervened, but the reason for the duel remained a secret.

FLINTLOCKS

Croft chose flintlock pistols as the weapons. Both sets of seconds had agreed on time and place.

The Dean of Crofts College the Rev S. J. Bozzant said: "We stepped in pretty quickly on this. We thought it might have been a joke—although it was the wrong sort of a joke."

Hawkes was told that if the duel took place his university career would be curtailed.—China Mail Special.

No Polaris 'lobby' in Royal Navy

London, Nov. 21.
An Admiralty spokesman today denied the existence of a "Polaris-lobby" in the Royal Navy.

But the spokesman declined further comment on a reported rift between admirals favouring more aircraft carriers, and others who wanted nuclear submarines capable of firing Polaris missiles.

At present there are only two submarines in the world able to launch the Polaris.

Both are American and one of them, by result of a recent Anglo-American agreement, will be using the Holy Loch, Scotland, as a maintenance base.

The Admiralty spokesman stated: "It would be quite impossible to pay for the building of a new generation of carriers and a fleet of missile-firing submarines simultaneously, out of the Navy's present budget of about £400 million."

He added that, at present, the Navy had not undertaken research to provide its submarines with a British version of the Polaris.

The missile required an atomic-powered vessel and the Navy had only one, the Dreadnought, at present under construction.—Reuter.

Visit palace

Tehran, Nov. 21.
Crown Prince Akhito and Princess Michiko of Japan drove to the Shah's private palace tonight. The Royal Japanese couple saw Persia's three weeks old Crown Prince Reza in his white stone palace 50 yards from the Shah and Queen's residence. Japanese and Court officials stated.—Reuter.

BITTER DEBATE

Mr Hammarskjold spoke as the 30-member world forum held another round of bitter debate on a Western-backed move to send Congolese President Joseph Kasavubu's delegation in the United Nations.

In his long statement to the Budgetary Committee, Mr Hammarskjold did not state officially to the Soviet Union, "a refusal to finance either the Congo operation or the United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East."

But he did rebut Soviet charges that he had "pursued a lavish and extravagant spending policy."

There had been no extravagant expenditures or use of the United Nations' structure, he said.—Reuter.

RUMOURS OF COUP IN IRAN 'COMPLETE NONSENSE'

MURDER OF QUEEN FARAH AND SON DENIED

Tehran, Nov. 21.
A Court spokesman here tonight denied all rumours from abroad about a coup here as "complete nonsense," and added: "The Shah, Queen, and Crown Prince are in excellent health."

The spokesman said the rumours of trouble in Persia were "spread by our enemies" who were trying to take advantage of "such fabrications."

An Istanbul newspaper had reported that revolution had broken out in Persia, and that the Queen and her baby son had been killed.

The Shah's brother, Prince Gholam Reza, and his sister, Princess Shams, tonight attended a reception given by the Japanese ambassador in honour of the visiting Prince Akhito and his bride, Princess Michiko.

The entire cabinet and security and service chiefs were present.

Princess Shams was giving a banquet later in honour of the Japanese couple, which the Shah and Queen Farah will attend.

The denial of the rumours was given by Mostafiz Moinian, Deputy Premier and head of the Publication and Broadcasting Department.—Reuter.

PROBE INTO THEFT ON THE CARTHAGE

London, Nov. 21.
Police boarded the 14,283-ton liner, Carthage, when she docked here today, to investigate the alleged theft of £1,000 from a passenger.

The money, in travellers' cheques, was missed from a cabin while the liner was in Colombo returning from Hong-kong.

The cheques were found four days later on the desk in the stewards quarters after the ship reached Penang.

Police today spent several hours questioning a number of stewards.—Reuter.

Young film stars betroted

Hollywood, Nov. 22.
Teenage idol Bobby Darin, 24, and Sandra Dee, 18, who fell in love while making a picture together in Italy, have announced their engagement, friends here said.

The two just finished "Come September" with Rock Hudson and Gina Lollobrigida.

Darin, who rocketed to fame with his hit recording of "Mack The Knife" flew in to New York from Rome a few days ago. Miss Dee arrived there yesterday and Darin met her at the plane.

Later in New York, he gave her a big emerald engagement ring and the blonde actress telephoned friends in Hollywood to say that they "were engaged."

The case was adjourned until November 20.—Reuter.

Liquor improves night driving doctor says

London, Nov. 22. Drinking in moderation can make a motorist drive better at night, according to Dr. Franklin Bicknell, Chairman of the Food Education Society.

Alcohol, by tending to dilate the eye pupil, improves adaptation to dark and twilight he said in a paper published here.

"On balance it would seem that moderate alcohol aids night driving," he declared. "Boiled down, it is the kind of stuff your wife leaves for you after supper when you are late—excellent for this purpose," he added.—China Mail Special.

Improves ability. "But," he added, "in fact it is the experience of countless men for centuries that a drink does enable them to function better, to achieve what otherwise they would not have achieved."

Proof that alcohol affected certain physical activities even markedly was no proof that such impairment caused accidents, he added. An experiment which showed that the only effect of drinking the equivalent of three double whiskeys was to cause motorists to look to keep to the centre of the road.

The traditional spoonful of olive oil for warding off drunkenness was less effective than a stewed beef or boiled potatoes, Dr. Bicknell also said. Alcohol in beer and wine was absorbed more slowly than in spirits diluted with soda water. The latter could cause dangerously sudden and unexpected drunkenness.

Dr. Bicknell said juries in drunken driving cases should not be forced by law to accept and base their verdicts simply on tests for alcohol in the blood. This would be "grossly unfair."

The only way to deal with such cases was to enforce existing laws effectively and leave decisions to the combined wisdom and common sense of the courts.

Dr. Bicknell told a press conference he believed the bulk of road accidents due to purely personal reasons were caused by temperance—the fact that some people were accident-prone.

People who had had an exceptionally high number of accidents should be psychologically examined before they were allowed to drive again.

If people ate a sandwich or sausage roll before drinking it would make an enormous difference to the number who became "clinically drunk."

"Boiled down, it is the kind of stuff your wife leaves for you after supper when you are late—excellent for this purpose," he added.—China Mail Special.

'Excuse us!'
Faux pas rapidly corrected

London, Nov. 21. Swastikas were hurriedly removed from a German Panzer tank captured from Rommel's Afrika Korps in the Western Desert before it was handed over to West Germany.

The presentation ceremony took place at the British Army's Royal Armoured Corps headquarters at Bovington, Dorset. The captured tank was in perfect condition—with freshly painted Afrika Korps insignia incorporating a small swastika.

But the Germans asked for the swastikas to be removed. A few strokes with a paintbrush removed the offending symbol from the Afrika Korps palm tree emblem.

Newspapers report the West German Ambassador, Herr Hans Von Helldorf, as saying: "Anyone who paints a swastika on a wall in Germany can be prosecuted."

"It would not be sensible to send back this wonderful gift bearing the hated Nazi emblem."

"If we just people for painting it on walls we can hardly allow it to remain on a tank at one of our camps."

The British Army has presented the tank as a gesture of NATO unity to the tank training school at Muensterlager.—China Mail Special.

THE DEMOCRATS' DILEMMA

Your comment on the new US

Democratic Administration's China Policy is most interesting, and all will agree that the Democrats have been made to carry the baby they would have gladly strangled at birth, for it is a legacy left to them by the outgoing administration that will go down in history of the USA as the Era of Brinkmanship and tony-turvy-dom.

Had not the earlier administration proceeding Presidential-elect Kennedy's government-to-be made such a sorry mess of their successive foreign policies when they passed along the troublesome baby known as the Republic of China in Formosa (as distinct from the People's Republic of China whose capital is Peking) from one administration to the other like delivering goods along the conveyor belt, the present Democratic Administration would not be embarrassed, and world events might have been different.

As it is, Kennedy cannot do anything but follow the line laid down by his predecessor, as any immediate drastic change in his foreign policy respecting China would produce disastrous result, not for the US alone, but also for her Allies.

The two Chinas policy is unrealistic and unacceptable to either or both, and certainly it is now too late in the day for US to follow Britain in "marrying" the People's Republic of China, and at the same time retaining a "mistress" named the Republic of China, ensconced in another "establishment" on Formosa, flirting from one to the other, and being spurned and unloved by both.

While officially "recognizing" Peking, Britain stationed a "consul" in Formosa ostensibly for the purpose of clearance of visas but nevertheless a most "improper" thing to do when "legally wedded" to the "principal wife".

Are we going to invite the Democrats of the US to adopt the same policy of "keeping two establishments", playing the dickens with the girl's hearts of these two enchantresses?

While the idea might tickle the fancy of the new administration, it is doubtful if the high-minded people of the USA would agree to this practice of political polygamy.

As you say, the nettle is assuming the proportion of a cactus, and whoever ventures to pick it up is going to have his fingers painfully pricked, and yet it assuredly cannot be left to lie around for other careless amateurs to step upon and have their soles (and souls) hurtfully pierced.

We don't envy the Democrats, and yet they cannot drift on without coming to some definite decision—whether to chuck the baby that has been soiling their hands for so long and have done with it, or recognise this "illegitimate" but lusty infant as the rightful heir to the UN throne. Solomon's wisdom in dividing the baby in two is impracticable in this case.

CELIBATE.

Retires after a million miles

Liverpool, Nov. 21. A ship's master who has travelled more than a million miles on 86 round voyages between Britain, Australia and New Zealand retired here yesterday after 47 years at sea.

Commodore Edward Noel Lawrey, of the Port Line, a subsidiary of the Cunard Steamship Company, came ashore for the last time when the 9,822-ton passenger cargo liner Port Sydney docked at Liverpool.—China Mail Special.

dear sir

Issue shouting from the rooftops about freedom of expression, objective reporting and sound judgment should be done with a sense of balance, not wildly as your correspondents have done.

Drawing a conclusion as you have done in your editorial under discussion when the situation in Saigon was still "fluid" is by no means sound judgment.

Again how can your treatment of events that were confused at the time be called objective reporting. And again, how can you hide behind the term "freedom of expression" to insult the President of Vietnam—and threatening President Chiang Kai-shek in for good measure—by calling them "dollar puppets".

It may well be that you had no intention whatsoever to insult the two leaders. But I think as a responsible editor of a responsible newspaper you should have exercised some discretion in the choice of words and displayed a proper sense of propriety, regardless of what true feelings you may have wished to express.

A REGULAR READER.

The Boeing 707

dear sir

Ideal homes

Like all Christian men -- and women -- I am, humbled and conscience-stricken by your reporter's account of the contribution from St James' Settlement to the Ideal Homes Exhibition, "which stands as a protest for the thousands living in all the squalid conditions of the Colony" -- and is a home for six.

Therein, Sir, I venture to suggest, lies the heart of the problem with which we, as a community, are faced -- the problem of Hongkong's birth-rate.

It is quite safe, I am convinced, to say that the majority of your readers have thought about this problem in so far as it affects themselves -- and have limited their families in proportion to their income.

But this does not seem to be the practice of many of the people whom Hongkong is trying to help. Far too frequently families of more than four children are the rule rather than the exception.

Surely, Sir, whilst believing that the Lord will provide, it is also logical to remember that He helps those who help themselves.

Perhaps a little advice on helping themselves is needed. Is it too late for the Family Planning Association to be represented at the Ideal Homes Exhibition?

Yours Humbly,
MOTHER OF TWO.

REPORTING FROM THE RITZY RESORT WHERE
EVEN PALM TREES TURN UP THEIR NOSES

Don Iddon's Diary

Residents-Elect for the White House—but by the time they move in there will be another member of the Kennedy clan.

Irish Jack—the snobs can scarce forbear to sneer

Palm Beach.
THIS is not usually Kennedy country, though the Kennedy clan have had a big house here for more than 30 years. Palm Beach, a lush and lovely resort, went right down the line for Vice-President Nixon, and so did the less glamorous West Palm Beach just across the blue waters of Lake Worth.

But now that the President-Elect is here, Palm Beach, the home of the millionaires and headquarters of international society, is bright with pride that this is now the winter White House.

Chasing girls

I HAVE met at least 50 people who have told me they used to play tag with Jack Kennedy on the beach, watched him climb the palm trees, and career around the avenues on his bicycle. Also chase the girls.

Senator Kennedy is finding the attention of the maid (like some and twice has slipped away on his own). He looks well, though his neck is slightly swollen. His detractors—and there are quite a few because of his water-thin margin of victory—said the thickness of his neck is due to massive doses of cortisone.

Lyndon Johnson—blow hard, work hard.

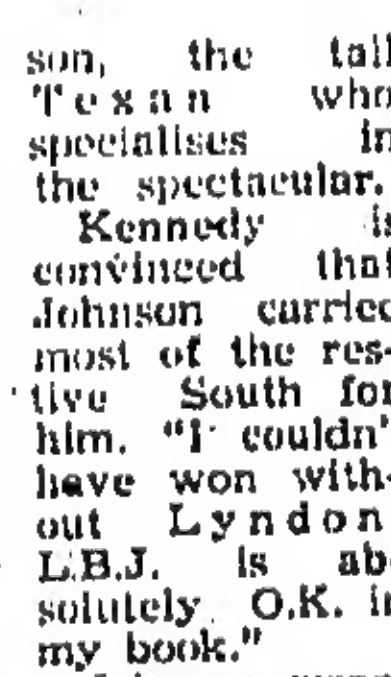

Just Fancy That!

BUS driver Tom Olsen is helping girls in Newport, Mon., to slim—by hypnosis. Mr Olsen told one girl in a hypnotic trance: "You must leave the frying pan alone and eat no white bread." The girl, who six months ago weighed 151 lb., is now five stones lighter.

A BOOK which claims to have the longest title in the world was published in New York recently: "How to Write Ten Best-sellers in Your Spare Time and Become the First Author on your Block. Unless There is already One Living on your Block, in which case you will become the Second Author on your Block, and that's Okay Too."

TWO zoos made news in Los Angeles by announcing they intend to swap some gnus. Griffith Park Zoo is full of she-gnuses. Fresno Zoo has too many he-gnuses. The exchange is expected to boost the gnu population.

In this solidly Nixon town the Kennedy clan has its winter White House...

The Duke—Prince of Palm Beach.

Jack will fly there when the birth is imminent. The Palm Beach season has not really started yet, but a few gapers and gawkers are here, and there are 50 newspapersmen and women. Worth Avenue, one of the world's great shopping streets, a boulevard of milk and money, silk and satin and sables, is half-closed, and my favourite pub here—the Alibi and Taboo—are shut.

Awaiting baby

Kennedy limits himself to two cocktails a day, but wolfs ice-cream like a schoolboy. He keeps telling us that he won't make any Cabinet appointments until after Thanksgiving, but I have the impression that he is anxious to keep on the front pages.

I have forecast a semi-coalition Administration for a long time and expect leading Republicans to be included in the Kennedy Cabinet.

Jack would like to appoint his brother Bobbie a brilliant lawyer and the Kennedy campaign manager as Attorney-General, but Bobbie tells us: "No, it would be like nepotism."

Bobbie has seven children, the familiar luscious hair, hates Labour and the Kennedy campaign, and has a streak of ruthlessness in him. He has the Kennedy charm, but is not as cautious and conciliatory, as brisk and decisive, as his brother Jack.

The President-Elect's wife, Jacqueline, the next First Lady and as fetching as a film star in Washington awaiting her baby.

Jack will fly there when the birth is imminent.

The Palm Beach season has not really started yet, but a few gapers and gawkers are here, and there are 50 newspapersmen and women. Worth Avenue, one of the world's great shopping streets, a boulevard of milk and money, silk and satin and sables, is half-closed, and my favourite pub here—the Alibi and Taboo—are shut.

The snobs in Palm Beach, and there are a few loling on their green lawns, their silver sands, and in their bright blue pools, say: "After all, Kennedy is Jack-come-lately Irish. The Prince of Palm Beach is the Duke of Windsor, who comes here every year."

It seems to me as I go around that there are lots of Cigarette-type young men about the place, escorting the rich old dolls. This, of course, is a favourite fortune hunters' place as it is stacked with dollars and diamonds.

I find it unfortunate that such strict segregation should be practised here. John Kennedy is a fighting Liberal and crusader for civil rights, and he is now living in a community which keeps the Negro down and out.

Living life

COLOURED people have to be off the streets by dusk, which seems to me outrageous. Yet it was the coloured—those who had the vote—who voted for Kennedy. The rich whites voted for Dick Nixon. At the next Press conference I might bring up this matter.

The town is thick with Rolls-Royces, Jaguars, Mercedes, Cadillacs. The palm-lined streets are dazzling in the sun and there are more pretty girls to the square-mile than anywhere else on earth. This is really living, as we say here. I hope Mr Kennedy comes here often and I hope I come with him.

Roderick Mann Stanley Baker doesn't let his money get him down...

Beirut (The Lebanon).
I WENT to Beirut's plushy £2,000,000 casino—and there, with a winning scowl on his face, I found Stanley Baker. When he was through counting his winnings we adjourned to the terrace overlooking the bay for iced drinks.

Here he explained why he was holiday-making in the Lebanon.

"I'm here," he explained, "because I believe in enjoying my money! I have no guilt complex about it like some people. I earned it and I like spending it. I don't intend to leave any money to my three children."

"I don't mean I will deliberately set fire to my last pound note before I kick the bucket. I mean that I have no intention of setting aside large sums of money for them to inherit."

"I want them to earn their own money as I had to. Inheriting money is a corrupting business."

"If one of my children comes to me at 18 and says 'I want a sports car,' I will say, 'Fine—go and earn it.'"

"Life was tough for me when I started, and I believe I benefited from it. I don't mean I won't help my kids to get started. Of course I will."

My parents helped me, and they had little enough. When I came out of the Army I couldn't get started. Nobody wanted my kind of toughness in those days. It was all tennis rackets and sports shoes."

"I was a waiter" "The only job I could get in London was as a waiter. Well, eventually I lost that, and I thought I'd have to go back to Wales and try for a job in repertory. But my parents sent me their entire savings—about £20—to enable me to stay in London until I got a break."

Baker stared out over the beautiful bay. Around us the warm Middle Eastern night was alive with sound, from crickets near by to klazons down on the winding coast road.

"Richard Burton had the same kind of background as me," said Baker. "We've been friends for years. And because he never had any money it seems to have made him very careful with it today."

"But not me. I believe in living. I know I'll never starve. If I ever stop earning star money—all right. I will take whatever I can get. I am not proud."

"As you can see," he said, "I am pretty realistic about this business. I know how large a part luck plays in it. Talent will keep you in it, but it's luck that gets you the breaks."

"Look at me. I played Bennett in The Cruel Sea and never looked back."

"I know the others used to laugh at this, but I didn't. I knew he had to do it."

"Weren't you afraid of being overshadowed in The Guns of Navarone with all those other stars?" I asked.

He grinned: "No. You see, I wear a beard in the film and

Impressed

"But do you know how I got the part? It was already cast. Another actor had it. But I rang up the film's director and he told me I could come down to the studio for a stogie-testing—feeding lines to an actor being tested for another part."

"Suddenly I found the camera giving me a close up. The director was impressed with the way I was reading. And what happened? They paid the other actor off and I got the part of Bennett."

"But imagine if I had not made that phone call..."

I asked him: "The film you have just finished—The Guns of Navarone—you had Gregory Peck, David Niven, and Anthony Quinn in that. With whom did you get on best?"

"Oh Anthony Quinn. He is my kind of actor and my kind of man. Greg is too quiet and serious, and David too smooth and polished."

"But Quinn—he's an emotional ball of fire. I have never known an actor exhaust himself the way he does. Before a scene he goes into a corner to grunt and growl and work himself up into the mood he wants."

Afraid?

"I know the others used to laugh at this, but I didn't. I knew he had to do it."

"Weren't you afraid of being overshadowed in The Guns of Navarone with all those other stars?" I asked.

He grinned: "No. You see, I wear a beard in the film and "I believe in living... I know I'll never starve..."

people always look at the man with the beard. It was my idea. As soon as I saw how stiff the competition was going to be I suggested the beard. And surprisingly enough, they said yes."

With or without competition Stanley Baker's rugged style has put him up in the Rolls-Royce class of actors. He has money in the bank and a Hollywood style home in Wimbledon.

He is wanted for Mutiny on the Bounty in Tahiti this winter, and for the part of Bill Sykes (in which he would be superb) in the Danny Kaye film version of the British musical Oliver.

—(London Express Service).

"I will tell you why Baker is in demand," a producer told me. "He is one of the few British actors who—like John Wayne and Robert Mitchum—clank when they walk across the screen. He's a real man."

I told Baker this as we walked back to the gaming tables. He grinned and piled a heap of chips on the table. The number came up. He grinned more and took a bigger pile off the table. "The only trouble is this name of mine," he said. "Stanley. I've always hated it. What a ridiculous, sissy name for a grown man."

Airmen get a week to beat the jungle

SINGAPORE.
RAF crews in Malaya are being put through a rigorous course to teach them the art of turning the jungle from a killer into an ally.

Every airman is parachuted into the jungle and expected to live on his own for a week.

He must hack his way through 8,000 yards of dense jungle and build a bamboo hut.

He is given no food and must learn to live off the land by gathering wild fruits and catching fish and small animals.

The airmen are given these cooking tips in a pamphlet—
SOUP: Boil fresh water turtles legs. Use the shells as dishes.

FISH: There is plenty in shallow water. Bake in mud or steam in leaves.

MEAT: Find rats in roots of large trees and roast them with leaves for flavour. Eat hot.

How does roost rat taste? Said one of the airmen from the jungle survival school: "A bit strong, but you don't notice that when you're starving."

The lessons paid off for one pilot who crashed his Sabre jet in the jungle. He was on his own for two nights before he was rescued by helicopter.

It was a wise decision indeed. Four spades would be hopeless and while he might have found a way to make four hearts things worked out much better with South handling the no-trump.

He went up with dummy's king of clubs at trick one and was delighted when it held the trick. Then he started after the diamond suit and passed

THIRD DIVISION CHESTERFIELD BACK OUT ON EVE OF PFA-LEAGUE MEETING

London, Nov. 21. On the eve of tomorrow's key meeting between the Professional Footballers' Association and the English Football League, 19 professionals with Third Division club Chesterfield decided today not to support any strike action.

OSCA FIRM TO BUILD NEW RACING CAR

Bologna, Nov. 21. The Italian firm Osea has decided to build a new Formula One car with a 1,500 cc—four cylinders—engine, it was announced here today.

Britain's motor driving ace Colin Davis will be the official racing driver for the firm during next year's racing season, it was further stated.

An official spokesman added that the firm will also build a three-litre sports car for the 1961 Car Builders' World Championship.—AP.

Ticket forgery racket for Barcelona-Real Madrid match nipped in the bud

Barcelona, Nov. 21. Barcelona Police have "nipped in the bud" a forgery racket which could have caused panic during the Barcelona-Real Madrid return match for the eighth-finals of the European Champion Clubs Football Cup scheduled here for Wednesday evening.

With all tickets sold, a week before the match, at the 110,000 capacity Barcelona Neu Camp Stadium the forgers were about to flood the black market with thousands of perfectly forged tickets.

Had the tickets been sold the jam-packed stadium could have reached bursting point in the heat of Spanish excitement during the match of the season.

Another draw?
Meanwhile, the managers of Real Madrid, the unbeaten holders of the title since the European Cup was first played in 1955 and Barcelona, the Spanish champions, are keeping their respective teams.

The teams drew 2-2 in their first leg at Madrid two weeks ago.

Unable to pick the winning team the majority of football experts predict another draw.

If this occurs, Barcelona is tipped to beat the title holders.

Probable line-ups
Possible line-ups for Wednesday's match are:
Real Madrid: Vicente; Merquitos and Casado; Vidal, Santamaría and Pachin; Mateos, Del Sol, Di Stefano, Puskas and Gento.

Barcelona: Ramallets; Olivella and Gracia Vargues; Garay and Segarra; Tjude, Kocsis, Evaristo, Suarez and Calber.—AP.

New York, Nov. 21. Minnesota regained first place today in the Associated Press American football poll in a close battle with Iowa and Mississippi.

Missouri, which had taken over the No. 1 spot a week ago after Minnesota was upset by Purdue, fell to fifth place following its first loss, to Kansas.

The balloting was so close that the National Championship, which will be based on next week's final vote, remained in doubt. Perhaps no poll since the AP National Rankings were inaugurated in 1936 is heading into such a photo-finish.

The leaders

The leaders, with first place votes, won-lost-tied records and points figured on a 10-0-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis were:
1. Minnesota (13½), (9-1), 42½.
2. Iowa (17½), (8-1), 41½.
3. Mississippi (13), (8-0-1), 39.
4. Washington (2), (9-1), 24.
5. Missouri (9-1), 24.
6. Arkansas (8-2), 22.
7. Navy (8-1), 18.
8. Auburn (1), (8-1), 14½.
9. Ohio State (7-2), 11.
10. Kansas (7-2-1), 48.

Others receiving votes were:
Duke (7-2-0) 36, Rice (7-2) 34, Yale (1) (9-0) 30½, Michigan State (6-2-1) 19, New Mexico State (9-0) 9, Penn State (6-3) 9, Syracuse (7-2) 8, Alabama (7-1-1) 8, Baylor (7-2) 6, Florida (7-2) 6, Texas (6-3) 3, Purdue (4-4-1), 2, Oregon (7-2-1) 2, Michigan (5-4) 2, Oregon State (6-3-1) 1.—AP.

Points win for Brian Curvis

Nottingham, Nov. 21. Welsh welterweight Brian Curvis outpointed British champion Wally Swift over 15 rounds here tonight and added the British title to his Empire crown.

Curvis, 22, and underdog in 16 previous bouts, weighed 144½ pounds and Swift 148½ pounds.—AP.

BUTCHER'S BOY TO SPORT MILLIONAIRE

Who has amassed the greatest fortune in the world of sport? Gene Tunney? Jack Kramer? Henry Cotton? Johnny Longden? Juan Manuel Fangio?

Surprisingly, a new publication, chooses none of these. Instead it gives the title of The Richest Man in Sport to a former Italian butcher's boy—Fausto Coppi, known in Italy as Campianissimo, champion of champions.

On January 2, 1906, racing cyclist Coppi died at Tortona. Ten days later, his will was published—revealing that he had been rich beyond the dreams of most other kinds of sportsmen. Coppi, who had been penniless when he left a North Africa prisoner-of-war camp in 1945, had £250,000 unspent 14 years later. Before that, he had earned over a million pounds.

By chance

Yet the career of the world's greatest racing cyclist began by chance, when, as a butcher's delivery boy, he chased after some professional racing cyclists for fun—and outpaced them all.

At 19, in his first year as professional, Coppi won the Tour of Italy. Two years later, he broke the world one-hour unspaced record with a mark of 28 miles 800 yards which was to stand for fourteen years.

Perhaps his greatest race came in the 1949 Tour de France. After five of the 21 stages he was more than half an hour behind the leaders. Then he annihilated the field in racing up the mountains, beating 120 of the world's greatest road racing cyclists over a course of nearly 8,000 miles.

No one approaches Coppi's record of more than a hundred wins in first-class road events, plus many time-trial victories, five Tours of Italy, two Tours de France, one world road racing championship, two world pursuit championships.

Those victories earned him massive prizes, advertising peris and work as technical adviser to cycle firms added to his immense wealth. He was paid as much as £1,000 for a single appearance. In 1952, his personal winnings amounted to £10,000, all of which he gave to be shared by his team-mates.

The 'woman in white'

The stirring rags-to-riches story—told in the newly-published "Grandstand TV Book of Sports"—is one of tragedy as well as triumph. As a racing cyclist, Coppi had many accidents, broke many bones in his body. And his private life was as sensational as his public life.

No other sportsman rocked Italy as Coppi did. When, in 1955, he left his wife and daughter and went to live with a doctor's wife, by whom he had a son, this woman, the famous "woman in white," was regularly at the finishing line to cheer home the champion.

Yusko Coppi died before he could fully enjoy his hard-earned fortune. Never forgetting his boyhood poverty, he saved carefully for the future. He realized that his racing life was nearly over and he had hoped to live comfortably in retirement for the next twenty or thirty years.

Instead he contracted a rare form of mania malaria and died at the age of 39.—London Express Service.

Detroit Tigers new manager

Detroit, Nov. 21. Bob Scheffing, ex-Major League catcher and manager of the Chicago Cubs for three seasons, was today named to manage the Detroit Tigers of the American Baseball League.

The 45-year-old former backstop for the Cubs, St. Louis Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds agreed to a reported $35,000 salary.

The signing of Scheffing ended a long search by the Tigers for a successor to Joe Gordon, now manager of the Kansas City Athletics. Scheffing is the eighth Detroit Manager in 10 years.—AP.

BOUNDING BOROTRA HAILS YOUNG STAN

By FRANK ROSTON

London. Former Wimbledon champion Jean Borotra, at 63 the still-bounding Basque, played Britain's newest and youngest tennis champion, 15-year-old Stanley Matthews jun. of Blackpool, at Queen's Club, London, recently—and was beaten.

Borotra was in London to complete a freak world record by playing in the 50th Franco-British International club match and so maintain his 100 per cent unbroken sequence.

He has played in all previous 49 matches and still takes his daily exercise so seriously that he went along with his doubles partner, "Toto" Brugnon, immediately on arrival for a knock-up.

There Borotra found young Stanley Matthews looking for practice for his match against the French junior champion, Jean Barley.

Excellent

Said Borotra, after mobile little Stanley had got the better of their solitary set: "I am pleasantly surprised and full of admiration because I think England has found a potential champion."

Little Matthews has excellent ground strokes and a good tactical sense which shook me. Above all he is modest and keen as I am not worried about his deficiencies in volleying because they will disappear as he matures. I am confident he will go far."

The long-retired Rene Lacoste returned as captain to join Borotra, Jacques Brugnon, and Young Stanley Matthews (left) chats with Jean Borotra before beating the veteran French tennis player in a practice match at Queen's Club, London, last week.

Henri Cochet in completing the famous four who once dominated world tennis.

With them was 45-year-old General Jacques Chaban-Delmas, Mr. Speaker of the French Parliament, and ex-mayor of Bordeaux.

This former hero of the Resistance movement, who became the youngest general in the French Army when promoted Brigadier-General by General de Gaulle at 28, is playing in the veterans' event.

When Chaban-Delmas went to visit Khrushchev in Moscow earlier this year, Mr. K., a keen hunter, presented "Club" with three bottles of vodka and a shotgun.

The vodka has been consumed and the shotgun left behind—though another member of the team, Robert Abdessalam, also a member of Parliament, has to have protection from Algerian terrorists, who wounded him earlier this year in an attempt on his life.

YES, I WOULD BACK A SOCCER STRIKE

Wages ceiling should be swept away

With all this talk of a pay rise, many people and even some players seem to have forgotten that the current wages controversy would not have arisen if the English footballer's contract offered him fair terms and protection. Because a man elects in this country to kick a football for a living, rather than work at a desk or machine, he faces all sorts of restrictions.

The most unfortunate of these is that a footballer has no freedom to change his employers. And though most employers treat their players with respect, some, as a result of this situation, do not.

Almost as unfortunate is the restriction on wages which acts constantly as a brake on the development of the game. Many clubs—not all of them rich—want to pay their players more, and what is really needed for the game is the complete removal of this wage ceiling.

Cause for complaint

Some people suggest that because footballers are paid for something they like doing, they have no cause to campaign for extra money.

Footballers like playing soccer, of course. But with due respect, isn't something of an impediment to argue that because a man likes his job he should not expect a full and proper wage?

A violinist likes his music, but does anyone suggest that he should give concerts for nothing? Besides playing football, I have another job—teaching. I like that job, too. But this fact plays no part in determining my salary.

Other people suggest that for a few hours' training a week, plus a match or two, £20 and bonuses is more than adequate payment.

Surely the criterion here is whether or not spectators are prepared to come along and watch a player perform in those matches. If large numbers of them are—and clearly they still are at top level—then £20-a-week is surely an inadequate wage.

The violinist is not paid by the number of hours he devotes to his playing, but by his ability to fill the concert hall.

I wonder what would happen in industry if salesmen, clerks, accountants and company directors suffered wage ceilings set by the moving caprices of the market?

There is an argument that if players were free to negotiate their own contracts, with their employers, they would inevitably be paid at different rates, and this would lead to discord in a club. But surely, in other spheres, men earning different wages work happily side by side.

Try somewhere else

If, as a member of a team I was paid only half the amount some of my colleagues were earning, my natural reaction would be to work harder at my game and to convince my employers that I was every bit as valuable as the others.

And if I achieved this to my satisfaction but not to theirs? Then, providing my binding was not permanently binding, I could seek to negotiate it elsewhere when it expired.

Of course, there are perks in the game for some players—such as writing and advertising. But these have nothing to do with the wages issue. The fact that I am being paid for writing this piece in my spare time should surely not influence my employers in deciding my salary for playing football.

A few people argue that footballers today are better off than they used to be. This simply is not true. Before the war, the maximum wage was £8 a week. And one doesn't have to be an economist to know that £8 then was worth more than £20 is today.

I have already remarked that a number of clubs recognise that their players are underpaid. They have said so plainly. And as a result, most players had come to believe that something of a New Deal in wages was on the way.

A bitter blow

It was a bitter blow for them to hear the decision of the club chairman, particularly when the reason became clear—that some clubs could not afford higher wages and therefore not even the ones who could were allowed to pay them.

Clubs in financial difficulty have everyone's sympathy. But surely the time has come for us to recognize that we cannot forever level down in matters like this.

I have stated before that there are too many full-time professional footballers in this country and some of the clubs' difficulty could usually be arranged for at least some of their staff to be part-time. This need not necessarily bring a lowering of standards. West Germany, who won the World Cup in 1954, showed what could be achieved by part-time players.

Keeping star players

A free, or freer, market in wages could lead to a greater concentration of talent at the top, perhaps even to a Super League, but there would still be room for an ambitious club whatever Division it was in.

A Fourth Division club with careful management and a sound financial policy, and playing football which attracted spectators, would be able to retain its star players by paying them properly and could thus hope for promotion to a higher division.

The advent of a European League could, of course, bring about reforms which the English League refuses to countenance at the moment. Clubs playing in such a competition would inevitably pay their players in accordance with its scales. And I cannot see a tournament built around teams like Real Madrid, Barcelona and Juventus adopting a misguidedly altruistic attitude.

And what of this strike threat by English League players? No one, of course, likes to strike. But can you blame players being at the end of their tether? They have been extraordinarily patient in their demands for reforms.

It is worth remembering what happened four years ago when the players were pressing for extra payment for playing in floodlit friendly games. Proposals were repeatedly put forward but nothing was done.

Strike action taken

Finally strike action was taken which involved Wolves' players in a refusal to play in a match against the Spanish side Bilbao. And almost immediately a £3 payment for such games was introduced.

It was regrettable that a visiting club had to be brought into the dispute, and that only a small number of English League players were involved, but the strike action was certainly effective.

A general football strike would present problems to many players, for the Players' Union have limited funds and would be unable to pay strike money. But exhibition games could be played on non-League grounds, and those players like myself who have a second job, would, I am sure, be prepared to help support a strike fund.

If the union does strike, the really important thing is that there is a solid show of strength, with players helping each other in whatever way they can. That way a strike could not fail to succeed in its aim.

MISS PERPETUAL RUNNER-UP SHARES TOP RANKING

By DEREK JOHN

A two-sport champion who has never quite reached the top is 27-year-old Ann Haydon, the bustling blonde from Birmingham. She has become a world-class player in lawn tennis and table-tennis but unlike Fred Perry she has not become a world-beater in either of them.

Luckless Ann has been given the title of Miss Perpetual Runner-up. In both sports she has reached the threshold of world champion status without success.

Her career as a runner-up began six years ago when she reached the final of the world table-tennis doubles championship. In one year, 1958, she played in three world table-tennis finals and finished runner-up in them all.

But for the past eighteen months she has been concentrating solely on lawn tennis and her progress has been spectacular.

Fine record

She has won many tournaments at home and abroad. She has defeated the world's two best players, Californian Darlene Hard and Brazilian Maria Esther Bueno.

No British player can approach Miss Haydon's overseas record this year. And yet she is still not a champion in her own right since the British Lawn Tennis Association have now placed her equal with Christine Truman at the head of the official ranking lists.

Presumably, this is based on the fact that Christine defeated Ann in the British Hard Court Championships and then reached the Wimbledon final while Ann was narrowly defeated by South Africa's Sandra Reynolds in the semi-final.

Yet Miss Haydon is ranked third in the world, above Miss Truman, in this month's edition of the U.S. magazine, World Tennis. Choosing his Top Ten for 1960, ranking expert Edward Potter writes: "If only her record against Bueno and Hard were to be considered, Ann Haydon would be Number One." I would rate Ann a greater match player than Christine.

and the greatest fighter in the game today. She has the courage, concentration, and dedication that go to make a world champion.

But does she possess the skill? Her top-spin forehand and sliced backhand show the influence of table-tennis and they have prevented her from out-driving more powerful players in the world's major championships.

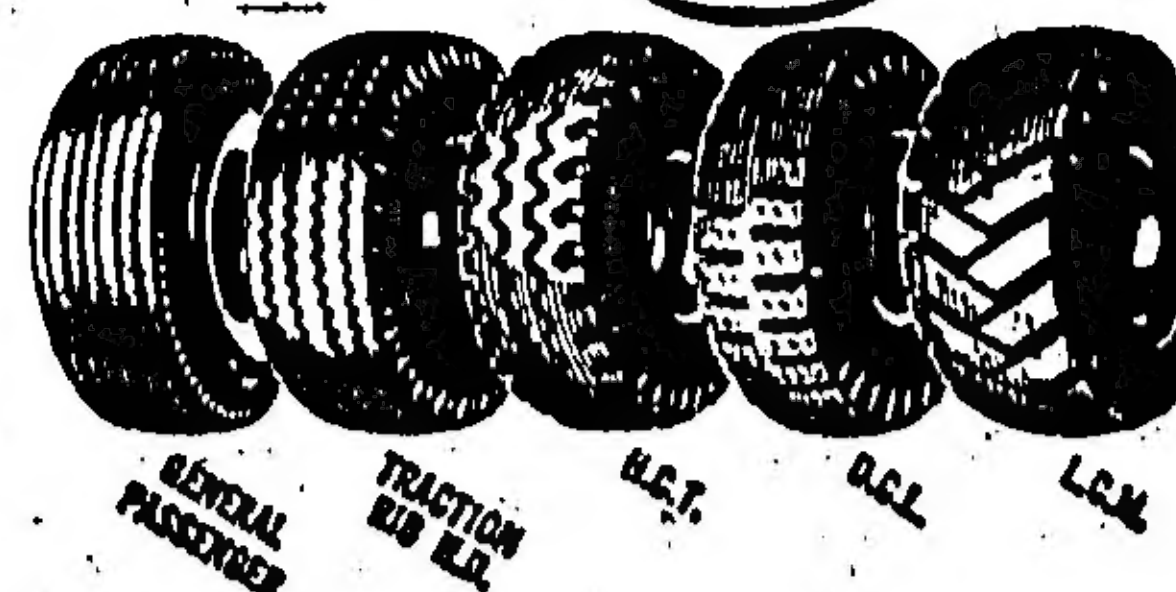

She has perhaps waited too long to concentrate on one sport. But there is one consolation for Ann Haydon. While she has never won a world title, she can fairly boast that, unlike many women tennis stars, she has never lost without fighting hard to the last.

Alleged attacker 'acted strangely'

A 15-year-old schoolgirl told the Criminal Sessions this morning that when a man attacked her mother with a knife, she felt that he was "acting strangely."

"My mother had been treating him well and yet in return he acted in that manner towards her," the girl, Tai Yiu-ho, added.

The girl was being cross-examined at the trial of a 33-year-old unemployed man, Kwong Kwong, charged with the murder of Tai's mother, Chan Suet-long, in a Graham-street house on July 21.

She had given evidence yesterday describing the alleged attack.

Suicide bids

This morning, Mr. Henry Hu, defence counsel, asked the jury if they knew that the accused had tried to hang himself with a towel, attempted to jump from the roof-top of the house, and tried to take poison with honey, which according to traditional Chinese belief, could cause death.

Tai said she did not know. Mr. Hu is instructed by Mr. John Gregory, of John A. Stokes and Master.

Mr. Denis D'Amanda, Remedial Crown Counsel, is prosecuting.

Hearing before Mr. Justice W. A. Blair-Kerr and a jury of three men and four women continues.

EUROPEAN FINED FOR DRIVING OFFENCE

A European driver, J. J. Kelleher, charged with failing to stop after an accident, was today fined $150 by Mr. I. T. Morris at Causeway Bay Magistrate.

He was also charged with failure to report to the Police after an accident and careless driving.

Sub-Inspector Atkinson told the court that Kelleher's car ran into a stopped car, pushing it forwards and damaging the front.

Kelleher drove on.

The accident occurred at 1 a.m. on May 22 on Leighton-road.

Six days later Kelleher was heard and admitted he did not report the accident to a Police Station.

Mr. John E. Davies of Brutton & Co. for Kelleher, said his client was not even here the accident occurred but believed it was his own fault, and drove away in a panic.

He asked the magistrate to take into consideration that Kelleher had been driving in the Colony without any traffic offence since 1947.

Exercise Touch Down continues Commandos land at dawn to repulse invaders

The sleepy bay bordered by Sai Kung Peninsula was invaded at dawn today by green-bereted commandos in full battle order.

The purpose of the landing, in phase two of "Operation Touch Down" which began yesterday, was to halt an enemy, represented by the 2nd Battalion, 10th Princess Mary's Own Gurkha Rifles, which was on the move from Three Fatigue Cove to Kai Tak.

Two troops from the 42 Commando Royal Marines launched the attack from four blimp-like landing craft.

They established a bridgehead then moved north up into coastal hill scrubland to block the enemy's advance.

They were covered by imaginary fire from naval warships and two RAF Venoms which swooped low in mock strafing a full company of commandos was landed by helicopter on a nearby hillside to lend support.

Hornet-like

At 8 a.m. another troop was put ashore in batches of five by a yellow, hornet-like helicopter, operating from HMS Bulwark which lurked five miles from the coastline.

They established themselves on the beach, of the bay, dug fighting pits and established radio communication with the advance forces.

This afternoon it is expected that the helicopters will bring in small transport vehicles along under their bellies. No ammunition, supplies or transport other than those brought in from the Bulwark can be used by the commandos during the exercise.

Operations in the bay were watched for a time by the Commander, British Forces, Lieut-General Sir Frederick McLeod and Lieut-Colonel R. D. Crombie, Commanding Officer, 42 Commando Royal Marines who earlier made an inspection of the surrounding territory by reconnaissance aircraft.

Ice cream

The exercises, the biggest for some years, are designed to give the commandos training for their role as "a kind of fire brigade" in case of emergencies, and have nothing to do with the defence of Hong Kong.

Today's invasion was largely ignored by the local inhabitants who went complacently about their jobs in spite of the overhead whirr of helicopters, spasmodic smoke screens and the explosions of blanks.

But a large gathering of children turned up to watch and an ice cream seller impressively took advantage of the situation to do a quick trade.

COURT TOLD SON FOUND MOTHER'S BODY

A 53-year-old woman egg seller left her house in the New Territories one morning to buy eggs and six days later her son discovered her decomposed body lying in the undergrowth, Mr. D. N. E. Rea, Crown Counsel, told Mr. Justice R. H. Mills-Owens at the Criminal Sessions this morning.

Mr. Rea was outlining the case to a jury of four men and three women in which 24-year-old Cheung Fu-kam was charged with the murder of Lam Hel.

When the jury was called, the Crown Counsel objected to one of them serving on the jury on the grounds that he knew the defence counsel, Mr. J. Swaine. Another juror, before being sworn in, asked His Lordship whether he was qualified to sit in as he worked in the same office with another juror.

When he said he was not under the orders of his colleague and that he had no contact with her, His Lordship said it would be right for him to sit in.

LOT OF MONEY

Mr. Rea said the deceased, Lam Hel, left the house on August 13 to buy eggs to sell at the Tai Po Market. "She had a lot of money with her," he added.

"She was not seen again alive and you will hear evidence from her son, Chung Chi-ling, who is a coolie working in the Kowloon Public Mortuary and the husband of the deceased, Chung Tau-pui. They will tell you that it was her regular practice to set off from her house almost everyday for buying eggs which were subsequently sold at the Tai Po Market and naturally involved a lot of money," he continued.

Mr. Rea said when Lam Hel did not return, her son applied for leave and instituted a search. "On August 19, her son discovered the body in the scrub in the area known as Long Au. The body was discovered because of the smell," Mr. Rea further said.

A doctor will give evidence to the effect that death was caused by manual strangulation and not from a fall or from an accident.

"There is the evidence of a 13-year-old boy, Yee Lai-shing, who saw the accused in the vicinity of the place where the deceased was found and his evidence will be corroborated by another witness, Chang Sang," Mr. Rea said.

Mr. Rea and Mr. D. G. Willis are prosecuting.

The accused is represented by Mr. John Swaine, instructed by Hastings and Co.

Hearing continues this afternoon.

FOUND WITH DANGEROUS DRUGS

Mother of four jailed for three years

Mr. T. L. Yang at Causeway Bay Court this morning sentenced a 40-year-old woman to three years in jail for possessing 10.6 grams of heroin and 51.8 grams of barbitone.

Ng Po-chun, of hut No. 51 Ngai Choi Hang, Fortress Hill, pleaded guilty.

Another defendant, Kwok Koi, who was arrested together with Ng during a police raid on November 19, pleaded not guilty to the charge.

His plea was accepted by the Prosecuting Officer, Sub-Inspector Y. C. Lam, and he was discharged.

Inspector Lam said during the raid the drugs were found hidden in a rice tin in a corner of the hut.

12 MONTHS FOR STEALING WATCH

A 29-year-old man, Cheung Kwong, who lives on the rooftop of 33 Kowloon City-road, admitted stealing a watch and committing a breach of a deportation order and was sentenced to 12 months jail by Mr. A. Garcia at Kowloon Court this morning.

Sub-Inspector Alex Lew told the court that the defendant was arrested on Nov. 14 while in the act of pawing a watch belonging to Hui Yuen.

He had six previous convictions.

Very serious

"The offence you have committed is very serious. The quantity of heroin found in your possession is very large."

"I do not know if the dangerous drugs were for your consumption or for others. If they were for your own consumption you would harm yourself with them."

"If they were for other people's consumption, then the offence would be more serious, because you not only harmed yourself, but also others," Mr. Yang said.

TWO YEARS JAIL FOR HAVING DRUGS

Yeung Kam, a 60-year-old man of no fixed address, who admitted possession of dangerous drugs, was sent to jail for two years by Mr. A. Garcia at Kowloon Court this morning.

Sub-Inspector Alex Lew, prosecuting, told the court that on Saturday, Yeung was found in possession of 81 small packets of dangerous drugs in a cigarette container when he was arrested at Ning Po-street near Temple-street.

Defendant has one previous similar conviction.

SEA CHASE MAN FREED BY COURT

One of five men arrested last Thursday in a pro-down sea chase was released this morning when Police withdrew against him a charge accusing him of helping a detainee who escaped from custody.

However, Police Supt. J. W. Brown, while requesting another remand for the remaining four men indicated at Kowloon Court, South, that there was a possibility of further charges being preferred against them "and others as well."

The defendant who was released was Chan Muk-hi, a 17-year-old fisherman living on board the motorised fishing junk which the police ambushed and bearded last week.

This morning, when the men made their second appearance before the Magistrate, Mr. E. S. Hayden, Mr. Brown preferred an additional charge of possession of 2.2 ounces of morphine against the first defendant, Yung Wang, who was originally accused of escaping from custody and 28-year-old Hui Lung Kong, accused of helping Yung in his escape.

The other two men charged with assisting Yung were Sit Ting, alias Sit Chi-lit, 34, a New Territories farmer, and So Cheung-tuk, 29, unemployed.

Mr. J. M. D'Amanda, Remedial, representing Sit Ting, asked the court to grant bail to his client.

The magistrate fixed bail at $500.

All four men were remanded to this Friday.

Extradition case Indian to return to Calcutta

S. L. Daga, 27-year-old Indian, arrested in Hongkong last month on a Bombay warrant for alleged criminal conspiracy, would leave by air this afternoon, it was stated at Central Court this morning.

During extradition proceedings concerning Daga, Mr. Simon Li, Crown Counsel, applied before Mr. E. Corbally to adjourn the case for one month.

Mr. Li said that the Indian Commissioner was prepared to issue a travel certificate to enable Daga to fly direct to Calcutta on condition that Daga's passport is delivered to him.

Daga had agreed with this condition, and the flight had already been booked and the plane would leave this afternoon.

THE necessity for better defensive measures at the police stations in the New Territories as protection against armed robberies and possible attacks by bandits seeking to rob the station armories was emphasised at the meeting of the Finance Committee of the Legislative Council yesterday.

The discussion arose during consideration of a vote for $1,400 for the erection of turrets at Sheung Shui and Au Tau Police stations.

Objection was raised to the passing of this vote by Sir William Shenton, who contended that, if the position was as serious as it was reported to be, then a much more intensive scheme had to be brought into force.

The vote was passed, the Committee strongly recommending that Government make a full investigation of the defences for their improvement at the earliest possible moment.

Commenting on the Government proposals, Sir William Shenton said: "It we have reached such a stage in the New Territories when it is necessary to turn these police stations into armed fortresses, something more serious needs to be done, not so much for the protection of the police station but for the inhabitants living in the New Territories. For these reasons I submit that this vote is not only unnecessary but unwarranted and I will oppose the vote."

The Hon. Mr. Paterson: "Perhaps my Honourable Friend might like to hang those peace posters he saw yesterday on wire in the New Territories so that they might melt the hard hearts of the bandits" (Laughter).

The Hon. Mr. A. S. Small, Treasurer, Straits Settlements, has been appointed to act as Colonial Secretary after Sir Andrew Caldecott has departed to assume the Governorship of Hongkong next month.

Italian display

TWO YEARS
JAIL FOR HAVING DRUGS

Yeung Kam, a 60-year-old man of no fixed address, who admitted possession of dangerous drugs, was sent to jail for two years by Mr. A. Garcia at Kowloon Court this morning.

Sub-Inspector Alex Lew, prosecuting, told the court that on Saturday, Yeung was found in possession of 81 small packets of dangerous drugs in a cigarette container when he was arrested at Ning Po-street near Temple-street.

Defendant has one previous similar conviction.
